

Device for Current Transformer Protection against Open Secondary Circuit

Developed a device that automatically short circuits the CT secondary winding by a latching relay with manual release if the voltage across the winding increases up to 600 - 800 V. The device was made for CT with three independent secondary circuits (circuit diagram is shown for one winding only). In addition, the device is provided with optocouplers for remote signaling.

